Christopher J. Maiyaki
Ag. Executive Secretary

ADAMU Adamu as Honourable Minister of Education oversighted the entire five-year intensive process of curriculum re-engineering of the Nigerian university system. By the laws of the land, the sequence of events, processed through the National Universities Commission and its Board, goes through the scrutiny of the Honourable Minister of Education. Malam Adamu Adamu blessed the inclusiveness and the technical quality of the process and secured the noting of the Federal Executive Council. He was appointed Minister of Education in 2015. He was reappointed on 21 August 2019. He was instrumental in the development, approval and implementation of various policies aimed at improving access, enhancing quality, equity, efficiency and effectiveness of the education sector and promoting technological innovation. His place in history as one of the successful Honourable Ministers of Education is assured. His enrolment in the Curriculum Development Hall of Fame is reward and recognition of his service to the Nigerian university system.

RASHEED, Abubakar Adamu, the far-sighted Executive Secretary of the National Universities Commission triggered the Rasheed Revolution through the Blueprint for the Rapid Revitalisation of University Education in Nigeria (2019-2023). He superintended the entire process of inclusive and broad stakeholder involvement in the development of the Core Curriculum and Minimum Academic Standards for the 17 Disciplines. For the first time in the history of university education in Nigeria Professor Rasheed offered all universities, the opportunity to add 30% to the centrally determined 70% of the total curriculum package to reflect institutional and programme uniqueness. He bestowed NUC and the Nigerian university system, over 80 legacy projects designed to elevate quality and ensure global competitiveness of Nigerian university graduates.

Introduction

In the over 1,850-year history of university education, no country in the world has comprehensively undertaken curriculum development as was done by the Nigerian university system in the last five years. This is a deliverable of the immediate-past Executive Secretary of NUC, Professor Abubakar Adamu Rasheed-inspired "Blueprint for the Rapid Revitalisation of University Education, 2018-2023" which was blessed by Malam Adamu Adamu, immediate-past Honourable Minister of Education after notification of the Federal Executive Council. The process was undertaken by NUC, drawing powers from the Education (National Minimum Standard and Establishment of Institutions) Act No. E3 L.F.N. 2004 which states:

"Empowers the National Universities Commission to lay down minimum standards for all universities and other institutions of higher learning in the Federation and the accreditation of their degrees and other academic awards in formal consultation with the universities for that purpose, after obtaining prior approval therefor through the Minister, from the President."

The parameters that cannot be matched, now and in a long time to come are (a) inclusiveness of the process with participation of all universities (federal, state and private); scholars (mainly full Professors) from all 17 Disciplines and 1009 Programmes; leadership of the Academies; the private sector and other categories of relevant stakeholders; and (b) composite package of the new curriculum- the Core Curriculum and Minimum Academic Standards (CCMAS); free textbooks on the curriculum; and model video lessons on topics in the CCMAS.

On the sidelines of the 42nd UNESCO General Conference held in Paris in November 2023 and in a meeting where the Nigerian effort at curriculum development in university education was narrated, it was affirmed that the participants in the process are worthy of induction into what can be aptly labelled- Curriculum Development Hall of Fame. Five years of strenuous work with a product which is forward-looking and with the triplet of curriculum, books on topics in the curriculum and model video lessons on the topics, cannot be rewarded with anything less. Perhaps, NUC may consider filing entry for the Guinness World Record 2025!

The Context and Brief History

Before independence in 1960 and in the early years of the development of the Nigerian university system, the curriculum of the universities was largely steered and coloured along the tradition of British universities. The establishment of the National Universities Commission in 1962 changed the landscape of curriculum development in the university system. Since it is empowered by law to set minimum standards for university education and enforce such standards, it took steps to harmonise the process of curriculum development across the universities and install a regime of accreditation. Key drivers of the process of minimum standards as encoded in the university curricula were the first and second national development plans and the national policy on education. These documents provided the directions to which the production of high-level human resources by the universities were directed. In turn, NUC and the universities developed the minimum academic (curricular) standards to reflect this aspiration.

One of the major responsibilities of the National Universities Commission as stated in Act No. 16 of 1985 and the Amendment Act No. 49 of 1988 is to lay down Minimum Academic Standards (MAS) for all academic disciplines being taught in Nigerian universities and to use the MAS to accredit the academic degree programmes. In 1989, the first set of the Minimum Academic Standards (MAS) documents was developed and approved for use by the federal government for 101 undergraduate programmes taught across the 13 major academic disciplines of Administration/Management Sciences, Agriculture, Arts, Dentistry, Education, Engineering/Technology, Environmental Sciences, Law, Medicine, Pharmaceutical Sciences, Science, Social Science and Veterinary Medicine. The MAS documents were used to accredit academic degree programmes in all universities. In 1996, 10 other programmes were identified and Minimum Academic Standards produced for them bringing the total number of programmes to 111.

In 2001, benchmark statements were produced for the various disciplines which were eventually merged with the content-based MAS in 2004 to form the outcome-based Benchmark Minimum Academic Standards (BMAS). The BMAS documents reflected extensive review of the composition of each discipline and the number of programmes increased to 133 from the initial 111. Major system-wide standards were proposed in the revised BMAS such as compulsory entrepreneurial studies.

The Journey to a Re-engineered Curriculum

The re-engineering of the BMAS to the Core Curriculum and Minimum Academic Standards (CCMAS) began with needs/gap analysis which sought views from employers of labour and other stakeholders about the quality of graduates from Nigerian universities and their reflections on the strengths and deficiencies in the curricula. This was followed by critical analysis of curricula of top-performing university systems in the world with a view to bringing the revised curricula of Nigerian universities to modern and contemporary standards. The third step was the drafting of the revised curricula by teams of experts using data from the first two steps. The product was version 1.0. As the fourth step, the revised draft (version 1.0) was sent to all Nigerian universities for review and input from university senates. Inputs from senates were harmonized, programme by programme and the harmonized documents emerged as version 2.0. This version was then subjected to intense scrutiny by national and international experts in the field over a period of ten months. The product was version 3.0.

A multi-stakeholder approach was deployed in constituting the panels for the exercise. The panels included: academic staff of Nigerian universities; representatives of the academies; representatives of professional bodies/associations; and representatives of the private sector.

In addition to the reviewers working individually and in consultation with their subject area peers, there were over 512 cumulative online meetings of the general assembly of vice-chancellors; discipline chairpersons, programme-specific reviewers and heads/representatives of international quality assurance agencies and institutions; discipline groups; and programme groups held between March and November, 2021. Physical meetings were also held to finalize the curriculum review exercise. Finally, Version 3.0 was presented to the federal executive council for noting, through the Honourable Minister of Education. The re-engineered curricula were formally unveiled on December 5, 2022 by Nigeria's Vice President Professor Yemi Osinbajo, represented by the Secretary to Government, Boss Mustapha. All the CCMAS documents are available for download at <https://nuc-ccmas.ng/downloads/>.

Highlights of the Core Curriculum and Minimum Academic Standards (CCMAS)

Ten highlights of the 2022 CCMAS which replaces the 15-year old and long-overdue-for-change Benchmark Minimum Academic Standards (BMAS) are: (1) comparable in content to similar curricula in the best university systems in the world and relevant to Nigeria's socio-cultural context; (2) addresses the knowledge and skills gaps in the curriculum it is replacing; (3) while providing 70% of core curriculum as minimum for all Nigerian universities, it allows universities to customise and bespoke the curriculum by adding 30% of courses to reflect their uniqueness of mission and contextual peculiarities; (4) it places accent on entrepreneurship, practical rather than theoretical knowledge and skills and the development of 21st century skills; (5) in line with contemporary global practice, change of nomenclature from Benchmark Minimum Academic Standards (BMAS) to Core Curriculum and Minimum Academic Standards (CCMAS); (6) in consonance with emerging development globally, the curriculum is to stimulate blended learning in its delivery; (7) strategically configured to produce future-fit graduates; (8) provides essential foundations for lifelong learning; (9) nurtures deep thinkers and problem solvers and graduates who are highly skilled in their professions and disciplines; and (10) encourages interdependencies of disciplines.

Institutional addition of 30% courses to the CCMAS

A unique feature of the CCMAS which is expected to go into effect in the 2023/2024 session was introduced by the Executive Secretary of NUC, Abubakar Adamu Rasheed following stakeholder consultation especially with the vice-chancellors. This is to reflect the contextual peculiarities of each institution in the content and delivery of its programmes. According to Rasheed in the preface to the CCMAS, universities have distinguishing vision, mission and strategic goals which of necessity, should reflect in the quality of their graduates, differentiating them from graduates of other universities with same degrees. The example is given of graduates of medicine. For example, University of Maiduguri in the northeast with the desire to produce doctors who can attend to diseases localized to the area, will need exposure of medical students to training in the treatment of such diseases. While the University of Ibadan in the southwest desires its medical doctors to be familiar with treating ailments that are nationally and globally common, special attention needs to be paid to such ailments that are indigenous to the locality. The same logic applies to graduates in all 17 disciplines, hence the opening of the curriculum development space for all universities to add 30% of the courses to the CCMAS to reflect their uniqueness.

This historic shift which allowed each university to add 30% of the courses in a programme to the 70% provided in the CCMAS was smoothened in implementation by intensive training of all academic staff in the Nigerian university system. Each university senate was required to set up a senate committee on the 30% addition and lower-level committees at the faculty, department and programme levels. Five training videos were produced. These were in a sequence to guide the development of the courses from programme level. The draft programme received approval at the level of the department, faculty and senate and thereafter, submitted to NUC through its Strategy Advisory Committee (STRADVCOM). Before final approval by NUC, STRADVCOM ensured sequential submission, review and resubmission of the drafts and finally, integration of the 30% institutional addition to the 70% of the CCMAS.

Outcome-based feature of the CCMAS

Unlike its predecessor- the BMAS, the CCMAS is outcome-based. Each course has a set of measurable learning outcomes which students should attain before earning a pass grade. This feature is aimed at hiking the quality of graduates of the Nigerian university system since the level of attainment specified in the learning outcome statements can be quantitatively and qualitatively assessed. In his keynote address at the sensitization workshop for all vice-chancellors, the secretary-general of the Association of African Universities (AAU), Olusola Oyewole, applauded this feature and wished other African countries that do not have their curricula configured along the outcome-based line, to consider this option.

Three tracks to ensure effective implementation

A re-engineered curriculum has a high chance of floppy delivery if the implementers are not trained and there is lack of supporting curriculum materials. Expectation of smooth implementation was the driver of the establishment of two CCMAS supporting projects. The first project is the training of all teaching and non-teaching personnel who would deliver the CCMAS. This project, which was led by a former minister of education, began with a training needs assessment. The report of the study showed twelve areas where training was needed.

These were:

1. Effective use of technology for implementing the CCMAS
2. Teaching 21st Century skills
3. Nurturing deep thinking and problem solving among Nigerian undergraduates (beneficiaries of the CCMAS)
4. Evaluating techniques of an outcomes-based curriculum like the CCMAS
5. Using variety of pedagogies beyond the lecture in delivering the CCMAS
6. Delivering the CCMAS via ODL and hybrid modes
7. Teaching large classes
8. Effective teaching of entrepreneurship and General Studies
9. Effective supervision of Teaching Practice, SIWES and internships
10. Delivering practical and other laboratory activities
11. Quality assurance mechanism for effective implementation of CCMAS
12. Effective delivery and assessment of the 30% addition to CCMAS.

The second project was the development of textual materials to support the implementation of the CCMAS under the leadership of the former chairman of the committee of pro-chancellors of Nigeria's federal universities, Professor Emeritus Nimi Briggs (late). The project leadership was taken over by Professor Eyitope Ogunbodede, former Vice-Chancellor of Obafemi Awolowo University. The Book 1 series was proudly delivered on December 14, 2023 in all the Disciplines except Law.

A third project under the curriculum supporting materials project is the development of videos by Nigerian lecturers on topics in the CCMAS especially those that are traditionally perceived to be difficult to learn by students. It is an extension of the Best Practices in University Teaching (BESTPUT) project which was initiated by NUC in 2001. This project has also taken off to a fine start with model video lessons in most of the 17 Disciplines.
